“ One of my favorite memories of Aunt Joyce (as I knew her) was when she and Uncle Don would invite me to spend time with them in the summer at their home in Brentwood. I had my own room with note cards and Aunt Joyce encouraged me to write notes home while I was visiting. They would take me out to dinner in fancy restaurants and it was just such a special time with both of them. She would say something sassy to someone, giggle and wink at me like we were sharing a secret together. Those were special days and times for me growing up. She will be missed, but her spunk and sass will live on long after her. Love, Michelle Hicks Warren
