“ Dear Mayo family,

I'm certain you are aware of the countless people Adam touched in his lifetime. My son Joshua is one of them. In 2018, he set out alone from Alabama to kayak in Cali after converting my Honda Odyssey into a sleeper van. He was 18 then & as a Mom, it was really hard to let him go. He is a very good kayaker, but finding a team to kayak with was tough because of his age & because he didn't know anyone. And of course, that's where Adam came in. He befriended Joshua, boated with him, and introduced him to tons of people Joshua still meets up with. Two years ago, Adam and Joshua met up again in Mexico. Joshua is in Baeza, Ecuador now, doing what he loves — whitewater kayaking. And I push the worry away, trusting him to live his best life. I will always be grateful for Adam, and he will always be part of our family's journey. May he rest in peace, and may you find some comfort in knowing what a truly kind person he was. We are heartbroken that Joshua won't meet up with Adam again, at least not on the River.

Mrs. Huber,

I can't begin to tell you how much your words mean to me. My intent was for Adam to leave my home as a good man. I didn't mean for him to be a kayaker. However, I've learned a lot in the past two weeks. Part of kayaking is being a good man. I thought kayaking was an individual sport. I see it another way now. It takes a community to be a kayaker. I'm so glad that Adam and Joshua were in a community together. I hope to meet you someday. We share a joy in two young men who met life head on. Thank you

Ms, Huber,

Your kind words are greatly appreciated. We knew Adam as a wonderful son growing up in rural a community. He was always joking and just all round full of fun.

After he moved to Colorado and grew into an adult, we would visit as often as possible but we still lost the day to day knowledge of his life. It is through the kind words of people like you that gives us more insight into the man he grew to become. Thank you, your words are precious to us .

I wanted to attend the service (coming from North AL) but we had travel plans over the holidays we couldn't change. Lord willing, Joshua will be back from Ecuador next Sunday. I know he would like to reach out as well.

“ So many great memories shares with "Mayo" during our time together at UT Knoxville. That infectious laugh truly rings loud in my mind on this day. There were so many moments filled with inside jokes and wise cracks that still bring a smile to my face to this day. My condolences to his entire family.

“ I met Adam 8 years ago through my husband KT - Adam was one of his dearest friends, his groomsman, and one of his first friends he was comfortable enough to introduce me to! I will forever love knowing Adam because of his kindness and warmth, his serious love of laughing (and will always have a Top 5 laugh of anyone I'll ever know), his commitment to his friendships, and his magical powers to always make me feel incredibly important and like what I had to say mattered a lot to him. Every time I was with Adam, my stomach hurt from laughing and half of the time I don't even think he meant it - he was just that wonderful to be around. Adam stayed with me for a weekend in our old house once when KT was out of town and Adam was visiting Denver, and I was scared it would be awkward and we'd have nothing to talk about for about 5 seconds before I realized that Adam was the best company - and the best person to watch hours of TV with and shit talk whatever we were watching together - in the world. I don't think there's anyone anywhere who couldn't feel lighter or more heard when they were around him. I feel so privileged to call him my friend and the world will always be brighter, more thoughtful, more full of funny memories, and more bestowed with a responsibility to squeeze every single ounce out of life in it because of his influence on so many of us. I will miss him and his smile, laugh, and passion for the good things in life will forever color the way I lead mine.

This comment is to Liz M. I can't tell you how much your kind words mean to Adam's family. To us. He will always be a star. He was willing to live a life many people only dream of. Your description of him captured him perfectly. You are appreciated.

Deepest condolences to Adam's family and friends. I've had the pleasure of many kayak based adventures and good times with Adam here in Steamboat. He was a legend, good man, and an inspiration to many. Seeing him style life helped inspire me to go to law school at age 40. I have since had the pleasure/displeasure of dealing with him in the legal arena, and having him whip up on me in court (I had three trials scheduled against him in the next month). I was looking forward to learning from him and both dreading and looking forward to opposing him in front of a jury.

If there is any way I can be of assistance in these tough times, please reach out. I unfortunately have lost other friends to the river, and have heard "at least he died doing what he loved" too many times. While possibly true, it rings hollow and still hurts terribly.

I'm pretty sure I guided Adam's father once, fishing up in the Flattops a few years back (Yampa Valley Anglers). I am so sorry for your loss.

Please know how very sorry our family is to hear of your loss. Our daughters thought the world of Adam and we all are so saddened for your family during this difficult time. We know he was a wonderful son and brother. May God give you peace and heal your hearts in all the days going forth. Our love and prayers to each of you.

It was with great sadness that we learned of Adam's death. We knew Adam as the brother of our son-in-law, Matthew. We had met him and been with him enough to know him as a good person with a great personality. When learning of the trips he took with his family and his friends he became more endearing for his love of the outdoors and zest for life. We had looked forward to learning more from him about his life and his adventures.

Our hearts go out in sympathy to his family and his friends.
