“ I got to know Frank during his presence at the Woodmont Hills church in Nashville. In his quiet supportive way he would show up and enjoy what was going on, whether it was a worship, a Bible study, or a bunch of single adults "hanging out."

Always generous, Frank would give me money to help pay for a retreat he wouldn't be attending. He wanted to be sure that someone who was financially challenged could attend. He was always sympathetic, offering encouraging words people who were going through difficult times.

I was particularly honored when my company was presenting a Christian parent/teacher training conference in Clarksville, Frank came to see what was going on. When I spoke to him there, he was--as always--wanting to be supportive and genuinely enjoyed seeing what we had to offer.

Physically Frank was a tall man, but seemed to prefer a low profile in his life. He was--and will continue to be for me--an ideal example of Micah 6:8 "Do what is right to other people, Love being kind to others, and live humbly, trusting your God."
