Red was born August 23, 1942 in Oxford, Indiana. Son of the late James Tera Dunagan and Lovella Sharp Dunagan. He is survived by his wife Shirley W. Dunagan; sons, Randall T. (Shauna) Dunagan, James E. (Tammy) Watts, Jr.; daughter, Sheryl Darlene (David) Medley; brothers, James, Farris, Larry, Bruce and Kurt Dunagan; sisters, Teresa Ingram, Angela Dunagan; three grandchildren, Jessica Mink, Jamie Doris and James E. Watts, III.

Shirley and Randall shared some words about her husband and his father. They both agreed that Red was the hardest working man that they ever knew. He loved to work and he worked tirelessly day and night. He loved people and he took great pride in doing his best in every job that he did. He loved his family and provided for all their needs unselfishly. Randall said his father probably never realized just how many life's lessons that his father taught him as well as many other people. A favorite past-time for Red was fishing. Red will be missed by all who knew and loved him.

“ Oh how I will miss Red, and the precious time we spent on Sunday mornings eating breakfast at Bethlehem. How we both agreed that even though we both dealt with cancer it was God's plan for us to witness/minister to other cancer sufferers that we would not meet other wise. He was never bitter about it, but uplifted many others.
