“ I learnt of your death a few days ago & I can't seem to get you off my mind, it's so unreal. I know we lost touch, but I do regret not reaching out to you just to see how you were or how life was treating you. I'll never forget you & the memories we shared. Your smile & eyes would light up a room & your laugh was so contagious (to me anyways). I'll never understand why, but to say you will be missed is an understatement. RIP Jacob & look down upon us each & every day.

“ Thank you for giving me the greatest blessing in my life, Kinsley. She is a miracle and truly a blessing to everyone she meets. Thank you for acknowledging that she needed more from life than what you were able to give. You gave her the greatest gift by letting her go. Prayers for your amazing parents who are hands down the most gracious and helpful people I've ever met. They will forever be a part of mine and Kinsley's lives. - Jerrica

“ I sit here and try to condense memories of OVER half of my life with him in it to put into words what he meant to me. It's impossible. There are NO WORDS good enough to describe the soul in him, the big brother I knew. The goofy brother I knew.

I can start with one of my best and very first memories of him. The first hug I ever got from him, he squeezed me tight and looked at me for a long moment then laughed, he told me he really liked my dress (I was extra nervous but SO PROUD of that dress, I picked it out just for that night, it had bats and pumpkins...and..well it was the beginning of summer) and that just for the dress he loves me already. I COULD'VE FLOATED OFF TO THE MOON, I was so happy, to feel so accepted and welcomed and loved, instantly. He made me feel "home". We went to dinner and ordered the same thing at the same time and he said, "yep, definitely my sis" I COULD'VE FLOATED TO MARS.

Jacob always made me PROUD to be his sister, to have a big brother like him. And he never let me think the feeling wasn't mutual. We had that connection, we just understood each other, the other half to my whole... where we didn't have to talk about anything, just being together, listening to music, it was like therapy growing up for us. I am SO LUCKY to have known him, and the world just isn't the same.

I will keep Jacob with me, and tell everyone I can about him, build relationships with those that knew him, cling to my nieces, tell his nephew so much about him he'll think he was hanging out with him just yesterday and not just the phonecalls he remembers.

I'll see ya later, Jake. Probably wear a better dress you can laugh at this time around. I love you.

“ Pam (Jacobs mother) text me this morning asking me to leave a message on here. I'd already written one that was sent off with him. Four pages in fact. As he said to me in his final words left, the memories I will cherish. I'm so blessed to have known him and his beautiful soul. My heart aches for more. My tears still fall as I write this. I'm not sure what happens from here but I know I miss him more than words. Not many really knew him but the ones who were so privileged understand and share my pain and longing. I spent 30 minutes this afternoon with a butterfly that has followed me for days. He fluttered and "chilled" next to my heart. We had a chat. He wants us all to know he is close and he's watching over. He is sorry for our pain. In the end though, we will get another smile, another laugh, and surely a witty comment. He's better now. On a personal note, I've enjoyed and look forward to getting to know each special person in his life better. He wants that. My love to you all.

“ Where to start, Jacob! That smile, those eyes! you stole my little girls heart and drove her daddy to distraction! I can never thank you enough for your greatest gift to us, sweet Brooklyn Mae. It hurts me that you won't be there to see her grow up, and I hope you know how much she loved you...Jacob, she couldn't take her eyes off you. She held on to you til the end. It was beautiful, touching and yet so sad. We will NEVER let her forget you. You were so loved and will missed....til we all meet again.

“ I wouldn't even know where to start on sharing a memory with Jacob. He left so many of his thoughts to us through music, I can listen to his favorite songs now, and they just make sense. Such a precious soul to have been so beat up by this awful world. If you had the chance to know the Jacob I knew and some of his close friends/family knew, you know how blessed you were to know his soul. So many mistakes, but such a big heart. There is not one doubt in my mind that he will be standing there waiting for us when we get to Heaven, with that smile. I am truly blessed to have known him, grown up with him, been there to hold him during hard times, been there during the happy times, being able to see him feel so accomplished and so proud when we had Brooklyn. I have no idea what it will be like to no longer be able to just call him, or send him a text whenever I miss him or just need to talk to someone who understands whatever I'm going through, because no matter the situation, his words were always comforting. I was blessed to know him, and I'll be blessed to see his face again someday in a happier place.

“ As I sit in this car with tears rolling down my face headed back to Knoxville it just doesn't seem real I can't believe you're gone!! As I look at the pics I find myself traveling down memory lane and it puts a slight smile on my face!! I've said it before but seeing the pics that were posted and playing at the service I'm reminded once again how much my son favored Jacob especially the early years! I find myself looking to the back seat at him and traveling down memory lane so much remembering all the little petty arguments we had and all the fun we used to have!! We lost touch for a while but then you ended up back with us!! It was such an honor for my aunt Pam to ask my son to be a Paul bearer wouldn't have wanted it any other way!! You got close to mine and Stephs kids in the last couple years and they were all honored to be a part of it!! How I wish we could go back and maybe do things a little different! We love you Jacob....save us a spot up there brother.....until we meet again we'll be missing you!!

“ This doesn't even seem real... Jacob was my best friend. We'd spend days at a time together just watching movies and talking about old memories. He was a true friend. A one of a kind person. The words "he will be missed" just don't cut it...
