“Daddy was the greatest man I ever knew. Not a lot of people got to know his heart and see his true colors. And he made it that way on purpose. And I am kind of glad he did because the ones who focused on the mistakes he had made throughout his life never came close to deserving to know the truly amazing man under that tough shell. My Daddy has always meant the world to me. I can't remember a time when I didn't worship the ground he walked on. I've made grown men cry with being so excited to see him when he was in rehab. I was always on his shoulders until his back started hurting him. When I was little I would hold his finger. Daddy had a rough life but I am more than proud to call him my Father. He would've killed someone over me and I know he is still looking over me right now. No matter how much I need him here I know I can't have him. But he is with Mamma now and he needed her. I have always been his angel but now he is mine. I really don't know how I am going to make it through these years and events without him. People say they are proud of me. But nobody means it like Daddy did. I could see the pride in his eyes. I just wish I could see him now. The world lost a great man but heaven gained an amazing angel. What keeps me going right now is knowing my daddy is safe now.
