“ A few years ago my daughters and I were traveling back home to Michigan. A truck was losing control on the highway and something pushed us to safety— we missed what I imagine would have been a horrible accident. When I looked up on the bridge I saw Jason’s name on a cross. I do believe his soul intervened and saved my family from a tragedy.

Thank you Jason for keeping me and my girls safe. We pass many crosses during our drives across the states. I will never forget yours.

“ I was always with Katey at your house. Eveytime I came over I could count on you to have burritos in your fridge. Since the first time I ate burritos with hot sauce and each you nicknamed me "burrito". I'm gonna miss hearing that. You was like my uncle as much as me and Katey hungout. I was with you when we had to put papa 6ft under. I had to drive you back that day. We made it home safe. I will miss you no matter what. When I got that phone called I just cried I didn't know what to do it doesn't just hurt me because I'm close to you it also hurts me because my best friend is hurting. I love you uncle Jason and I will never forget you. This burriot will keep her spice and stay strong for Katey. Rip and fly high in the sky with Nana and papa.

“ You were like my second dad. You were always there when needed. You know how to crack a simple joke and everything would be okay. I know you were hurting and I know it's been a rough couple of years but why?! Why did you have to go so soon?!? I miss you. I didn't even get to say goodbye. My last time seeing you was the day we laid down papa and gosh it hurt so bad but now you're in a better place. Flying high. And I know you're gonna raise some hell up in heaven. Rest easy. Don't cause god to much trouble. Lol. I love you and always will.

“ Wow so unbelievable that he's gone. Seen him a few hours before his accident, got a hug if I would have known it would've been the last time I'd seen him I'd held on a little longer and hugged a little tighter. So sad that his children have to grow up without their daddy. R.I.P MY FRIEND.....
