“ Phil wasn’t just someone I knew. He was the person I lived with, worked with, laughed with, struggled with, and celebrated with. He was the friend who turned ordinary days into memories, who could make a bad moment lighter and a good moment unforgettable. Living together gave me a front-row seat to everything that made him who he was—his humor, his stubbornness, his heart, his loyalty. I’m grateful for every moment we had. For every laugh, every memory, every lesson, every story. Phil gave more to this world, and to the people who loved him, than he ever realized. Rest easy, Phil. Thank you for being my friend, my brother, and one of the best parts of my story. I’ll miss you, always.
